A Message from the LCC President

MARGARET HAMILTON

Yael Pachino of YP Photography

From the moment I first set foot on campus, I felt the warmth, welcome, and the support not just of the faculty and staff at LCC, but of people like you – our donors and friends – who are determined to help our students achieve their goals. Thank you for truly making me feel at home and part of this wonderful community and thank you for your help making LCC a place where our students can succeed.

“Student success” is a phrase we’ve used countless times to describe our goals as a College and community. What does it mean? For some, it means moving from high school to community college and eventually transferring to a university. For others, it means a credential or license leading to a career. For many, it means a transformative life change. Our students are 18 years old, 35 years old, and 50 years old. Their time is taken up with jobs (sometimes more than one), children, and aging parents.

Because of these diverse and complex backgrounds, “success” looks different for each of our students. We need to recognize this. Our work must include tangible, achievable pathways for every student – pathways that are defined at the outset, so that our students have a roadmap that is easy to use, understand and follow.

However, it’s not enough to simply provide a roadmap. As you know, opportunity alone does not ensure success. At LCC, our faculty, staff, administration, and donors work together to provide our students with the tools, services and supports to help them navigate these individual roadmaps. Many of our students have no experience with higher education and no one at home to guide them. Students at LCC are not just learning math, or welding, or chemistry. They are also learning how to file for financial aid and how to navigate federal, state, and local bureaucracy. They are learning how to find the tutoring center, how to get their Veterans’ benefits, and how to fill out a scholarship application. They are learning how to balance child care with college, and they are learning how to find their answers on their own.

The success of our students is not optional. We must all be laser-focused on that success, and it must be a part of every classroom, every strategy, every donation, every choice we make. The success of our students is why I am here. It’s why you are here. I am thrilled to have you with us as a donor, supporter, and friend of the College. Your focus has never wavered, nor will mine. Together, we will make sure that “student success” is not just a catch-phrase – it is a tangible outcome that transforms lives.

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Margaret A. Hamilton". The script is elegant and cursive, with the first letters of the first and last names being capitalized and prominent.

A Message from the Foundation Director

WENDY JETT

As I read over the stories in this annual report, I am reminded that the people we highlight are just a few of the many supporters who have had a tremendous impact on this campus. This past December, four women in particular moved me with their donations. As legacy donors, these women were modest with their lifetime giving, but each left a portion of their estate to Lane which had an immediate and transformative impact. They were not connected to each other in any way, and it was happenstance that their estates closed almost simultaneously.

As I worked through each woman's gift with an estate attorney or executor, I was struck by the abundance of their generosity, their purity of intent, and their desire to support our College and students.

The women all had radically different backgrounds and philanthropic goals. Laura Olsen was a former journalist who later worked for the United Nations. She gave a large part of her estate to support student scholarships at LCC. Diane Daudt was a former LCC faculty member who taught English as a Second Language courses. Her time at LCC affected her deeply, and she provided for both the ESL program and its students through her estate. Sasha Chernoff was a psychologist (and a professional clown!) Her life's work was dedicated to helping victims of domestic violence and she ensured this work would continue after her lifetime with a transformative gift to Lane's Gender Equity Center and Women in Transition program.

Finally, Anne Bonine, a retired South Eugene High School teacher, included a significant unrestricted gift in her estate plan.

Anne knew that with a gift to fund the work of the Foundation many future gifts like those from Laura, Diane, and Sasha would be possible. Generosity like this is a reminder that gifts can take very different forms.

As we prepare this annual report, we are also preparing our end of year endowment reports and trust summaries for our donors and mailing notes of thanks to our annual donors who give throughout the year. No matter how your gift is made, we recognize that it is not just a check, or shares of stock, or a charitable trust – it is a statement, a promise, and a commitment of support to our students and our College. It is personal, and it is inspiring. Thank you for sharing your passion with us.

Dentistry in Action

LEAH HICKSON
LCC ALUMNA

Dr. Leah Hickson began her journey in dentistry at an early age. As a Thurston High School student, she found an after-school job with a local orthodontist. During her senior year, her employer and eventual mentor, Dr. Hughes asked, “What’s next for you?” The question prompted her to start a conversation with her parents about her options. This was when she first realized that financial barriers may keep her from attending college. When she next spoke with Dr. Hughes, he encouraged her to attend LCC and study to be a dental assistant.

A first-generation college student, Leah says LCC was a comfortable and safe place to learn and grow. She graduated with her certification in 1993 and went straight to work. After a few years, a local dentist, Dr. TerryLynn Tennant encouraged her to go back to school and pursue a dental degree. Dr. Tennet allowed Leah a flexible work schedule as she entered her undergraduate program at the University of Oregon.

She graduated in 2002 and was immediately invited to travel to Guatemala to assist with dentistry in the field. Finding the remote village work incredibly rewarding, she felt reinvigorated and confident in her next step – dental school at Creighton University.

Leah returned to Eugene after four years and opened her own dental practice, Serenity Dental. She owned her practice for 10 years and was able to realize her vision of a relaxing dental experience for her patients. She credits much of her success to her mentors, Dr. Hughes and Dr. Tennet, and the guidance and support they gave her as she started out in her career. Leah says that taking segmented steps into her dental career helped her make the connections she needed to be ultimately successful. She has remained connected with LCC over the years, serving on the Dental Assisting Advisory Board, offering clinicals for students, and hiring graduates.

Today, she supports dental assisting students through LCC Foundation scholarships and believes the Dental Assisting program has incredible value in the community. She hopes to see even more support from local dentists in the future for dental education at LCC.

This year, Leah is asking herself the question, “What’s next?” She recently sold her private practice and is excited to explore her opportunities as she envisions “being involved in the community in a whole new way.”

“I have noticed a tremendous difference in professionalism, preparedness, education, ethics, and etiquette between LCC graduates and applicants from other programs. I have much more confidence in the LCC grads.”

Live A Good Life

SELCO COMMUNITY CREDIT UNION CORPORATE PHILANTHROPY

SELCO Community Credit Union's support of Lane Community College began in 1989 with a gift to the Area of Greatest Need, and it's a partnership that has only deepened since. In addition to funding 35 LCC Foundation scholarships over the years, SELCO has been a longtime sponsor of the Foundation's annual Harvest Dinner and was the event's Title Sponsor in 2017.

This sustained relationship between SELCO and LCC speaks to the organizations' shared values. Bob Newcomb, SELCO's CEO and President says, "LCC's commitment to transforming lives through accessible education coincides with SELCO's mission to improve our members' social and economic position."

With input from SELCO's Board of Directors, SELCO has recently honed its charitable giving, focusing on removing barriers, financial and otherwise, to learning at any age – a focus that aligns with LCC Foundation's pursuit of making education affordable and attainable to all. "There's no denying the compounding effect when both organizations work together toward these goals," says Newcomb. As a credit union founded by Lane County School employees, SELCO's educational roots – and dedication to students and teachers – go deep.

In Lane County, SELCO supports the educational efforts of Eugene and Springfield Education Foundations, NEDCO, Ophelia's Place, Parenting Now, Looking Glass, the Relief Nursery, and many other nonprofit partners in all 26 counties Selco serves. You'll often find SELCO employees leading discussions of financial education topics in traditional and nontraditional classrooms.

"At the end of the day, SELCO's goal is to empower our members to live a good life," says Laura Illig, SELCO's Vice President of Marketing. "LCC is an essential community partner for helping people transform their lives. It's a place that allows people to pursue their dreams in a way that works for them." And that's why SELCO and LCC have continued to be a great fit for nearly 30 years.

Illig says, "Everyone defines 'a good life' differently. If living a good life is providing for your family or connecting to your community, then we see supporting LCC as critical to that goal." As the credit union pushes forward in its mission, continuing to grow and serve new members across the state, the LCC Foundation is excited to move forward with them.

"Whether or not we have benefited directly from an LCC education, we all profit as members of a community enriched by the knowledge, curiosity, and passion of LCC grads." says, Bob Newcomb

Landing Gear Engaged

JOSH SUMANTRI
SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT

Aviation is something of a Sumantri family tradition. Joshua Sumantri's father started out as an aviation maintenance technician and retired an aeronautical engineer; Josh's uncle is also an aeronautical engineer. It's no surprise that Josh is currently in his second year of LCC's Aviation Maintenance Technician program.

After high school, he began working as a ramp agent for U.S. Airways in Arizona. A few years later, he wanted more opportunity and enrolled at a university, but quickly found himself under a heavy load of student debt, undecided on what program to pursue, and no closer to a career. In 2016, Josh decided to return to the aviation field and enrolled in LCC's Aviation Maintenance Technician program (AMT).

He considers the LCC AMT program to be in the "upper echelon of community college learning" and has enjoyed working on the engines and planes the aviation students have access to, especially the LearJet. He also appreciates the close-knit learning environment the program provides – with only 20 students there is ample opportunity for small group instruction. Josh notes that teamwork and strong sense of camaraderie are a highlight of the program and one of the reasons it is so successful.

He says, "the instructors make things fun, but also challenging. They are incredibly supportive of everyone's needs." Josh says that the students affectionately call lead instructor, Neal Gallagher, "Dad." He is like a father figure to many in the program – providing consistent encouragement and reminding the students to bring their best selves to their work each day.

The support Josh has received from classmates, instructors, and his wife has helped him through the challenging program. This year, he received the LCC Foundation's Charles E. Petrie Scholarship. Knowing that someone outside of his family and team believes in him has helped reinforce his confidence that he is on the right track. The scholarship has allowed him more time to study and stay on track with the AMT program's challenging coursework.

June 2018 will mark the end of Josh's time at LCC. Following graduation, he will move to Seattle and hopes to work for Alaska Airlines. Just like his father, Josh may be interested in returning to school in the future to work as an aeronautical engineer. Landing gear is engaged – next stop, graduation.

"The material covered in the program is difficult, but I've found myself excelling in challenging subjects like physics and electricity, it's something I didn't expect."

Giving Students Wings

NEAL GALLAGHER
LCC FACULTY

“The best part of my job is watching students take what they’ve learned in lecture and perform,” says Neal Gallagher. Before coming to Lane, Neal worked in commercial aviation for 15 years. Today, he is one of three faculty instructors in the Aviation Maintenance Technician program at LCC.

Neal’s LCC journey began while he was taking welding classes and happened to hear a jet engine kick on next door in the aviation program. Instantly, his curiosity was piqued and he changed his program of study to Aviation.

After years of experience in the field, Neal returned to Lane and believes one of the most compelling aspects of the program is not just the employment potential, but the diversity of jobs available. Graduates have worked locally on heavy-lifting helicopters, regionally on jet airplanes, and internationally in contract maintenance positions. Helicopter service providers such as Erickson Inc., Croman Corporation and Columbia Helicopters all employ former Lane Students. Alaska/Horizon airlines and Boeing also make annual trips to LCC to meet with and recruit AMT students.

Currently, Neal says, the hardest decision graduates face is choosing which employer to work for. With an increased demand for jet and helicopter services, employment opportunities in the aviation industry have never been better.

AMT students can also earn Airframe and Power Plant certificates which are recognized internationally. This allows them to work for any company that does business with the United States. Neal says, “With those certificates, they can travel the world or stay in the Northwest, whatever suits them. This is a job people are proud of. It’s great money right out of the box. Our graduates can make a solid wage and do important work to be proud of.”

One of Neal’s favorite things about instructing AMT students at LCC is the transformative value of the program. Motivated students can achieve life-changing success in just a few years. Neal says, “This is one of those fields where being earnest, hard working, thorough, and being creative pays dividends. Scholarships play an integral role in student success.” The program averages 40-50 students a year with nearly 90% completing their certifications within three years.

“When a student earns a scholarship, it shows them that someone else respects what they are doing and understands their mission. It’s nice to have someone look at them and say, ‘you know what? You’re worth it.’”

ANDREW MIRMAN
STUDENT & U.S. VETERAN

In his early 20's, Andrew found himself minimally employed, living alone in a new state, and quickly going into debt to pay his bills. He felt frustrated and aimless. After serious consideration, he decided to enlist in the Air Force. He says, "I decided the best way to mature was to join the military, which would allow me the opportunity to become a more successful person, to learn greater discipline, and find my passion in life."

And that he did – Andrew graduated basic training with honors and finished flight crew training with the Top Graduate Award. In 2011, he was deployed to Afghanistan in support of Operation Enduring Freedom. He flew 106 combat missions totaling over 700 flight hours and he received seven aerial achievement medals. During his deployment, Andrew learned that he thrives in a fast-paced, high pressure environment, something he had never truly experienced before joining the service.

After returning to the States, he was stationed in Oklahoma City. That year, a tornado swept through the city and destroyed dozens of houses. When Andrew found out a crew-mate's home was one of those destroyed, he worked with his squadron commander to assemble a team of 100 volunteers to assist with the rebuilding effort.

The satisfaction he derived from being a part of a measurable positive impact on someone else's life was pivotal for Andrew – he realized a desire to have a career where he could make a difference in individual lives. Andrew was honorably discharged in 2013 and has been enrolled at LCC studying to become a nurse. He is the recipient of the LCC Foundation's Frances Warren Nursing Scholarship. His drive to make a difference has carried over to his time at Lane Community College. He says, "One of the things I am most passionate about is helping people that are going through similar struggles." He is currently serving as a Foundation scholarship ambassador, mentoring other students about the scholarship process. He has also set up study groups for his nursing classes and spends around 12 hours a week working and studying with his peers.

As Andrew looks toward the completion of his nursing degree this spring, he is excited for the future. He plans to take advantage of LCC's long-standing articulation agreement with Oregon Health Sciences University and enroll to earn a Bachelor's of Science in Nursing. He will finish the BSN program in 2020 and his goal is to work in the Urgent Care unit at Peacehealth Riverbend Hospital in Springfield.

"My experience has shown me that no matter how bleak things look, as long as I have a positive attitude I will always come out on top."

AMY HAUGLAND VOLUNTEER SPOTLIGHT

LCC Alumna and former scholarship recipient, Amy Haugland, knows first-hand the impact that accessible and affordable education has on the lives of students and our community. Amy experienced challenges still faced by thousands of LCC students today. While learning to navigate college – from financial aid to choosing a major and scheduling coursework – she found a welcoming educational home at LCC. A passion for writing and literature led her to choose an English major. She also worked as a tutor, which helped her pay for her education and make a difference by helping her peers excel in their own coursework. Amy says, “My time as a tutor at LCC was one of my favorite jobs.”

Amy completed her associate’s degree, transferred to Northwest Christian University, and worked for several years before returning to LCC. “Coming back to LCC gave me the opportunity to do some exploration and figure out what it was I really wanted to do.”

She resumed working as a writing tutor and realized that many of the students she worked with were non-traditional students who had come to LCC to retrain for new careers. Many had been employed in the trades. However, due to the recession, job opportunities were scarce. They came to LCC for a new start, and to find new opportunities.

Amy then transferred to the University of Oregon to earn her bachelor’s degree in English and medieval studies. Reflecting on her journey, she says, “LCC was instrumental in allowing me to step back, look at my options, and change direction.”

In 2013, Amy and her husband, Alex, also an LCC alum, established the New Beginnings Scholarship to help ensure students would have access to funding and support during times of transition. This annual full-tuition scholarship through the LCC Foundation supports non-traditional students.

Amy is part of a group of over 70 community members who volunteer their time to read and score LCC Foundation scholarship applications every year. “The Foundation’s scholarship process is very balanced, we do look at GPA and grades, but we also look for potential to succeed – there are other forms of merit and we take that into account.”

After a few years as a donor and a volunteer reader, Amy decided to increase her commitment to the LCC Foundation by joining the Board of Trustees. Her perspective as both a donor and an alumna is incredibly valuable to the Foundation as we work to fulfill our mission in support of accessible and affordable education.

“I would like to see less burden on our students, and I feel like donating time or money is an excellent investment for anyone to make.”

15th Annual Harvest Dinner

Great Food, Friends, & Fun

SELCO Community Credit Union was the TITLE sponsor for the 15th Annual Harvest Dinner, McDonald Wholesale returned as our multi-year CHEF sponsor, helping raise over $325,000 for scholarships and programs at Lane! Our guest chef and alumnus was Max Petty of Eden Hill Restaurant in Seattle. Chairs Niles and Mary Ann Hanson not only brought in new sponsors, but also donated a wonderful symphony themed package for the live auction! Harry Ritchie's provided a jewelry boutique and live auction jewelry. Our generous Platinum, Gold, Silver, In-Kind, and other sponsors made the evening fun and filled with friends. Thank you!

AWARDEES

JULIE ASPINWALL-LAMBERTS & JIM ELLISON

Both Julie and Jim worked at LCC for more than 20 years. Julie is one of the founders of Womenspace and established an endowed scholarship at LCC to support survivors of domestic violence. Jim passed away in November 2016 from causes related to Alzheimer's disease, but his support of LCC lives on through the James Ellison Endowed Diversity Scholarship. Julie and Jim began their support of LCC in 1987 and became members of the President's Circle in 1993.

PEACEHEALTH OREGON REGION

PeaceHealth Oregon Region joined the President's Circle in 2001. Their generous faculty support for LCC's Nursing Program has enabled LCC to expand admissions from 56 seats in 2006, to 80 seats today. In addition, they offer clinical placements for nursing students, have made significant donations of medical equipment, and helped fund the construction of the Health and Wellness Building. Since 1996, PeaceHealth has donated over $4.5 million in support of Lane Community College.

TYKESON FAMILY FOUNDATION

The Tykeson Family Foundation is a supporter of many organizations across the state and has been a member of the President's Circle since 1999. They have helped fund construction of both the Center for Learning and Student Success and the Health and Wellness Building. They also support LCC Foundation scholarships and have been an annual Harvest Dinner sponsor since 2005. The Tykeson Family Foundation has contributed over $2 million to LCC Foundation initiatives.

Notes: *Deceased

We welcome estate gifts and other planned gifts that will be realized after the lifetime of our donors. Planned giving complements your family priorities and there are options for donors at all income levels. These gifts have a large impact on LCC and our students, and can involve a variety of assets. Your gift will have a lasting impact beyond your lifetime.

Planned gifts may include bequests and other estate gifts, charitable trusts, charitable annuities, life insurance, or other modes of giving. We work extensively with planned gifts and would be happy to discuss options with you or with your representative.

(We strongly encourage donors to seek independent legal and financial counsel about estate planning.)

For those wishing to designate the LCC Foundation as the beneficiary in a will or other instrument, please reference: Lane Community College Foundation, EIN: 23-7113266

For more information on planned giving, please contact: Tiana Marrone-Creech at (541) 463-5538 or Tiana@laneccfoundation.org

Year in Review

FOUNDATION NEWS

- Each year, the Foundation transfers between $2 million and $5 million to the college for programs, faculty support, capital projects, and scholarships.
- Over 70 community volunteers participate as part of our scholarship team, reading and scoring over 900 student applications.
- In 2017-18, we awarded seventy $2500 Shining Star Scholarships, which are open to all LCC students in all majors.
- In 2017, four brand-new endowments were started by donors, and over 20 endowment donors grew their endowments with additional gifts!
- For the second year in a row, the LCC Foundation received the CASE Educational Fundraising Award. This national award recognizes overall performance in fundraising, and we were the only community college foundation in Oregon to receive this award! Thank you for supporting our organization and supporting education in our community.
